Four places to escape this winter

Belle Mont Farm, St Kitts

This resort on St Kitts delivers what has become known as “agro-tourism” – but with a Caribbean style. It means you’re basically staying on a farm – but don’t be put off. It’s actually more like “a posh hotel”, where you can enjoy lounging by your plunge pool, “watching the sun set behind St Barts in the distance”.

Most of the food you’ll eat at the resort is grown on the farm, says Fiona Sims in The Times. Dishes include callaloo leaves, “used as a wrap with an accompanying peanut and passion fruit dipping sauce”, and raw okra, “hollowed out and then filled with a pearly aubergine caviar”. And while there’s no beach to shout about, there is a sustainable 18-hole golf course, hand-weeded by staff. The resort is still under construction – “though not within earshot” – and will eventually feature 84 cottages, villas, four “farmhouses”, and 100 hotel rooms with 12 eateries. There will also be six restaurants, one of which will be headed by “top New York chef”, Dan Barber.
